Prospect Medical Systems awarded NCQA Accreditation for Population Health Programs

LOS ANGELES, Calif. – Aug. [24], 2022 – Prospect Medical Systems received a three-year accreditation from the National Committee for Quality Assurance (NCQA) in population health programs for both kidney disease and heart failure. This accreditation was awarded after a rigorous review process of Prospect’s strong systems, processes and personnel in population health and is a testament to the organization’s commitment to quality.

“For over 25 years, Prospect Medical has been committed to improving the quality of care that our members receive. We feel extremely fortunate to receive this recognition from the NCQA for our high-quality, impactful Population Health Programs that have, and will continue to prioritize our members and their needs,” said Jim Brown, CEO, Prospect Medical Systems.

“Our dedication to helping our members improve their quality of life while receiving attentive, personalized care from providers in our Population Health Programs, has been at the forefront of our mission to deliver quality, compassionate, accessible healthcare. We are thrilled to be awarded this incredible accreditation to solidify our determination. It would not have been possible without the hard-work and continued efforts of our whole team,” said Dr. Derek Lanier MD, Chief Medical Officer, Prospect Medical Systems.

Prospect Medical Systems joins only 31 select organizations in achieving this NCQA designation.

“The Population Health Management programs moves us in greater alignment with the increased focus on person-centered population health management,” said Margaret E. O’Kane, President, NCQA. “Not only does it add value to existing quality improvement efforts; it also demonstrates an organization’s highest level of commitment to improving the quality of care that meets people’s needs.”
